

THE VOLUNTARY DEPOSIT CONTRACT IN THE ROMANIAN CIVIL CODE REGULATION

LAZAR RARES-PATRICK

Spiru Haret University
patrick_lazar@yahoo.com

Abstract

In terms of the Romanian Civil Code, the deposit contract is a contract by which the depositary receives from the depositor a movable asset, under the obligation to keep it for a period of time and to return it in nature, the restitution of the property being a condition for the valid conclusion of the contract. The usual form of the deposit is the regular deposit, called voluntary, within which the depositor's option of the depositary choice is unhampered and unrestricted.

Keywords: deposit contract, regular deposit, voluntary deposit

JEL Classification: K120